The Palace on the Prairie

Home of E.W. Marland

E.W. Marland, millionaire oilman and the 10th Governor of Oklahoma built this mansion in 1928, at a cost of 5.5 million dollars. The Marland Mansion is truly one of America's castles! Modeled after the Davanzati Palace in Florence, Italy, this breathtakingly beautiful "Palace on the Prairie" denotes incredible attention to detail with carved wood, sculptured stone, wrought iron arched doorways, and Waterford crystal chandeliers. This internationally known showplace contains 43,561 square feet spread over four floors ~ complete with leather-lined elevator, twelve bathrooms, three kitchens, an elegant ballroom with a 24-karat gold leaf-covered ceiling worth over 1.9 million dollars and seven fireplaces. The mansion is a National Historic Landmark and is available for weddings, reunions and private parties.

Standing Bear stood. Turning to face both the judge and audience, he reached out his right hand, and stood motionless so long that the stillness of death which had settled down on the audience, became almost unbearable. At last, looking up at the judge, he said, :

“That hand is not the color of yours, but if I prick it, the blood will flow, and I shall feel pain. The blood is of the same color as yours. God made me, and I am a man.”

Early in the spring of 1893, B. S. Barnes, having heard that the Cherokee Strip was to be opened for settlement, headed for Arkansas City with the hope of building a new city in this frontier area. Barnes had sold his furniture manufacturing plant in Adrian, Michigan, desiring to make his fortune on "The Strip." After driving for many days, with a team and buggy, over what is now referred to as the counties of Kay, Grant, Garfield, and Noble, he observed a wagon road in Kay County, that ran from Arkansas City southward and crossed the Arkansas river at a point one mile south of the present Arkansas river bridge near Ponca City. The B & M ford was located at this point, and had been used for years as a buggy and wagon crossing. About a mile northeast of the ford on the same wagon road, was a spring.

The fact that the spring was a good water source and was located on the main road to the Osage County, caused Barnes to decide that near this point was the logical site for his contemplated city. Barnes went back to Arkansas City to announce the location of the new city and to organize the Ponca Townsite Company. In September 21st, four days after the Oklahoma Land Run, surveyors completed surveying the selected section of land into streets and lots, and the lot drawing began. And such was the beginning of Ponca City! Certificates for lots in Ponca City were sold by the Ponca Townsite Company for $2 each and each certificate was good for either one business lot or one residential lot. Over 2,300 certificates were sold. A little girl drew the cards from a box placed on Grand Avenue between 3rd and 4th streets. From these drawings attendants recorded the certificate owners' names and lot selections in large bound books. This is believed to be the first instance of a new city being started with a town lot drawing. It took two days to complete the drawings and Ponca City was born.

Ponca City is also know for oil. With oil came money, money that left its indelible mark on our community -- beautiful golf courses, posh hotels, lavish homes, rich gardens, a grand theatre -- an elegant legacy upon which our citizens today continue to build.

For a town of 25,000, Ponca City has an exceptional number of world-class museums. In addition to traditional museums, Ponca City also has a large variety of historical exhibits, architecture and attractions. Ponca City's museums, ranging from native American history, oil history, western and ranching history and feats of wonder built during the oil boom of the 1920s.

Oil had a large impact on the history of Ponca City. The Conoco Museum is perhaps the most high-tech of all the Ponca City museums and tells an interactive story of Conoco's impact on the local economy. The Marland Grand Home and the magnificent Marland Mansion, both owned by Mr. E. W. Marland himself, tell the story of Marland's rise and fall from wealth. Wentz Pool is another example of the large and grandiose construction projects funded by the oil boom in the early 20th century.

In addition to our rich oil history, Ponca City has a strong and intimate tie with Native American history as well. Standing Bear Museum pays tribute to one of the first civil rights leaders in America.

The Pioneer Woman Museum & Statue is a must see for any visitor to Ponca City. Standing at 17 ft. tall, the statue commemorates the bravery and grit of women in Oklahoma and is a reminder of what women had to sacrifice during the pioneer days.

Pioneer Woman Museum & Statue

The museum's education center features craft demonstrations, special exhibits, an interactive time line, and the Pioneer Woman Walk of Fame. The museum is dedicated to the enduring spirit of women—past, present, and future—who see no boundaries.

Downtown Vibes

Grand Ave. in Ponca City is truly becoming the place to be. With its beautiful streetscapes, historic storefronts and newly-added public art, downtown Ponca City is full of things to do and see for all ages.

Back in 2017, Vortex Alley Brewing opened in downtown Ponca City, which marked the beginning of a reawakening of downtown Ponca City. Vortex Alley Brewing began with four friends who just liked to brew beer. But after an overwhelmingly successful booth at a local Main Street event, the four friends took their hobby out of the garage and onto the corner of Central and 3rd St. Just around the corner is the Grand Cigar and Lounge, which opened in 2019 and boasts a variety of cocktails and an even more impressive cigar selection. These two new late night hot spots joined Astoria Bistro & Blvd, which has been the staple downtown bar for the last decade.

A renaissance of art has been the spark behind the resurgence of life in downtown Ponca City, and downtown Ponca City continues adding more great retail and food & drink locations every year.
